The Department of Homeland Security has identified Mobile Mini as a critical infrastructure business. We play a vital role in the important work that needs to be done to protect our communities and keep our people safe.

The Coronavirus pandemic has considerably changed the way in which businesses operate and the way in which society is able to interact with those businesses and with each other. Not only state and local governments, but also the CDC are enforcing stricter health and safety mandates to help control the spread of COVID-19.

Grocery stores across the nation are having to buy many non-perishable and hygiene products in bulk to keep up with customer demand. The problem is, they typically don't have the space to store these items. This represents just one example of why the Department of Homeland Security has identified Mobile Mini as a critical infrastructure business. We play a vital role in the important work that needs to be done to protect our communities and keep our people safe.

One of USA Today's Top 50 Grocery Stores in 2019 is now working with Mobile Mini to solve this problem. We are providing them with portable, on-site storage containers in order to give them additional space that is easily accessible. In fact, they are taking advantage of our "tunnel units," those with doors on both ends. Those units allow grocery store employees to keep high moving items in extra quantities beyond the space available in the store to quickly restock shelves. We are even providing a couple of their stores with refrigerated van trailers through our Temporary Site Solutions product line.
